giving vent to a burst of bullish enthusiasm the past two days. But visions in business quarters of the freest Christmas spending since 1930 or 1929 were sharpened by the arrival of the heralded steel wage raise, additions to the long list of companies increasing payments to shareholders and an upward commodity price trend. Loking over the dividend calendar, the trends of business and corporate earnings, Wall Street analysts were confident many more millions would be added to flow of Christmas money. Some reminded, as a dampening touch to Christmas cheer, that Uncle Sam would have his hand out to collect his share in taxes of the extra payments forced in part by the federal levy upon undivided earnings.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (Saturday). (AP)-A general strike of seamen in the port of New York was proclaimed immediately effective at midnight last night by Joseph Curran, chairman of the seamen's defense committee

Curran made the announcement shortly after striking seamen voted to empower the committee to call an active strike to replace the passive "sit-down" strike which prevented a number of vessels from sailing during the past week.

The vote, authorizing the strike strategy committee to change the "sit-down" strike now being carried on to a general seamen's strike, which would involve crews leaving the ships and forming picket lines, was accompanied by a repudiation of the agreement made with steamship companies by officials of the International Seamen's Union.

The striking group, led by Curran

It must be a combination of many reasons which caused many classes of people to vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

Obviously they were not all relief workers and industrial workers. There must be, in that huge vote, millions who thought it would be unwise to change in the midst of improving conditions, whom Roosevelt had attracted. ditions, whom Roosevelt had attracted by his boldness, nor by his confidence, or by the general tone of his political creed; by his attacks against the United States in charge of deportation of undesirable aliens and one of the prosecuting attorneys in the Millions Relieve Him.

Some of these caused the charge of "demagogery" to be raised against him. But evidently, for one reason or another, millions believed him. Or course, his relief policies without question swung large sections of the population; the "Santa Claus" line coined by Alfred E. Smith had more truth than fiction in it.

Mrs. Roosevelt shares her husband's popularity, and her share is increasing. In the campaign just ended, in which she accompanied the President, she was received at every single stop with outbursts of cheering and applause and calls of "speech, speech."

Usually she acknowledged the applause with nods and smiles. When the crowds were especially insistent, she informed them she left the speaking to "the one doing the campaign ing."

COURSE The experts are already squabbling over the question of whether Mr. Roosevelt is going to the left and become more aggressive. He probably will do neither. More than one person who has talked to him since election has a feeling that he will go along just about as he has been going, mindful of his increased responsibility as well as the onerous load of his unmanageable majority.

Johnny Weissmuller thrills the Loew's at the Fox theater all this week with suave Herbert Marshall in "A Woman Rebels," an absorbing story based on a novel by Netta Syrett.

Again the genius of Katharine Hepourn is pictured on the screen in a story close to the heart of womanhood and one that is a surging revelation of a woman's defiance of oppressive social restrictions. Her performance can not but further her as one of the outstanding dramatic artists.

Herbert Marshall, in the male lead opposite the tempestuous Hepburn, gives another of his characteristic performances, one that is certain to please each audience.

Johnny Weissmuller thrills the Loew's Grand audience this week with the latest jungle adventure, "Tarzan Escapes."

Aided by petty Maureen O'Sullivan, who starred with the screen Tarzan in previous pictures, the production marks a nearer approach of the "Jungle King" to civilization than in any other showing.

Captured by a "bring-'em-back-alive' animal collector who locks Tarzan in a cage with the intention of taking him to London to exhibit, the son of the primitive wilds outwits the civilized enemy, swings his way through the jungle by vines and trees by the North Carolina delegation and modified by amendments adopted by the entire group, follows:

"Magnificent Brute"

Opens Run at Georgia

The informer turns into "The Magnificent Brute" in the film which opened a run at the Georgia theater yesterday. Victor McLaglen is the brute, and a tough one. But, to top all of his physical attractions, his one main weakness is blondes . . in wholesale lots.

His was the same towering figure that won the academy award for his acting in "The Informer." and again in the current Georgia picture he offers a flawless performance. He is a maker of steel, accustomed to the roar and glow of the flaming, molten metal—but is not as well educated in the wiles of women.

And it is the beautiful blonde Binnie Barnes who keeps the "Magnificent Brute" in a state of fevered infatuation. But not without a desperate and most complicated effort does Jean Nixon, a blond widow, give up in her attempt to "get her man," McLaglen, himself.

Youthful Bill Burrus is the hero worshiper who gains the friendship of the giant steel worker while Wil.

Auburn, Tech in 44th Meeting; Georgia Battles Florida

Auburn's footbal squad left their Pullmans at noon yesterday-turned around and faced them and, with tears in their eves, rendered six verses of "Home, Sweet Home.

The Auburn football team has traveled about 8,000 miles this season and has about 1,000 more miles left on the ticket. It has been a splendid advertisement for the south and for the college it represents. It has played good, hard, clean football and its members are actual students who maintain a legitimate: above-average grade in their classes.

It began the season with a schedule over which everyone wagged solemn heads. It was, as I recall the statements in September, a suicide schedule and one impossible to play without suffering three or four defeats. But already November's chill winds are blowing up the browned and yellowed leaves. And there are but three more games left after today. And Auburn has lost but one game and tied one. No southern school has defeated Auburn. Only one southern team has

The Plainsmen go into the game with Georgia Tech today as the favorite team. Perhaps if one could peer into the skulls of the Plainsmen and read what is there, the pre-game guesses might be different. It may be the boys are train-weary and football-tired. If they are this

Tech team may win today. If not then Auburn will win. Following Georgia Tech comes the L. S. U. game. That should be defeat No. 2. But it may not. Auburn almost defeated L. S. U. last year. Then comes Loyola and then Florida. Auburn should escape with no more than one Dixie defeat and that not a bad one.

But, whatever happens, the season has been, for Auburn, a

THE HOPE BUG.

According to the best reporters working at the time on the Mount Olympus Messenger, when Pandora got her box of gifts, she opened it before the proper time, as women will do. And before she could slam the lid every gift save one had winged its way to escape. The one gift left was Hope. And that's the gift she left to mankind. And you'd be surprised how the Tech people are making use of Pandora's gift. They have hoped themselves into a state where they believe the game can be won.

The Tech team is making use of it. Yesterday they were working with a lot of hope bubbling and boiling beneath the hirsute coverage of their briskets. Hope is a grand thing and the Techs, fans, players and coaches, are hoping to beat the band they'll beat the Auburns. Tech can win-if the line charges and if the team blocks

But Auburn-made something of a mystery team by their travels-remains the favorite today. A Tech victory will be an upset. But those upsets have been the vogue this season.

Did I say the Techs are hoping? Well, they are. I hope to tell you, they are.

A victory today and one over Alabama and one over Georgia would make the Tech season one of those gilt-edged things.

HOPE AT JACKSONVILLE.

What hope the Techs are not using is being employed by the Georgia people as the team goes to Florida.

There is no denying the fact the Georgia team has suffered some unkind blows from Fate or Lady Luck, or whatever it is that brings a flock of busted knees, a covey of bum ankles and a herd of injured shoulders. Not to mention a racing stable full of Charley Horses.

Today Big Bad Bill Hartman is back in the Georgia line-up and the Georgians are hoping so hard they have about died They hope to win the first conference victory.

Josh Cody's team, which earned a surprisingly fine victory over Maryland last week, is a slight favorite to win today. But Georgia may surprise.

Both institutions are hoping for a little pigskin happiness to Russell was in Roton's spot at left visit the state this week. The past three weeks have been very tackle sad indeed as far as the state of Georgia is concerned.

After saying last Saturday morning the Fordham-Pitt game would be close and might even be a ne, your old parties.

The Tigers are in snape. And, they never again to look over the shoulder of some expert engaged say, rather hungry.

Auburn looks like the best bet today by at least a couple of touchdowns. But admittedly, the game is a mystery. Auburn is best on the facts. But how much has a long trip to the coast, a long, hard game there and a trip back, done to Auburn? Georgia is an even bet with Florida.

Over at Birmingham there is one of the game. Over at Birmingham there is one of the game. The dope appears even. I'd name Alabama only because Alabama is playpears even. I'd name Alabama only because Alabama is playpears even. If the game were in New Orleans, I'd name Tuber as starting tackle. Phil Chance, the modern Job, will bandage up his boils and start at the other tackle.

top again tomorrow with many a collegiate standard still flying high. After last week's debacle among the favorites, it may be argued that no further reports from the battle front can be as startling but the casualty list seems certain to be increased.

Down below the Mason and Dixie line, for example, two of the three top-notch unbeaten platoons, Alabama and Tulane, come to grips at Birmingham. The third, Louisiana State, probably has been advised to look for serious trouble from Mississippi State, coached by old cavalryman and war-time tank commander, Major Ralph Irving Sasse. For the benefit of L. S. U., it may be quickly recalled that Sasse's team was the first to knock over Alabama and the Army last season. On the other hand Army last season. On the other hand L. S. UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Thoughts of pirates and pirate days came to me when I read this letter from one of our friendly readers:

"Dear Uncle Ray: Although the writer of this letter is 76 years of age, he is as eager for what Dr. Rott. Wheeler calls 'romance-history' as a boy of 15 is, or should be. I should like to suggest a topic to you for some future date, the story of Jean Lafitte. Lafitte did not loom large in world history, but I am convinced that few boys and girls of today know the part he played in the history of old New Orleans. If you will excuse a personal an lote, the writer had a grandfather who saw Lafitte at New Orleans on January 8, 1815, and several times thereafter.

"Very sincerely, "ERNEST M. PLUMMER."
I wish to thank Mr. Plummer for his suggestion. I think a story about Lafitte would be a good one, and shall try to take up the topic at a later time, perhaps in a series about pirates. Hardly a day passes without mail reaching my offices which will have most interest and value for readers.

Now and then a letter comes to me topic by next Monday—I need the material for school." It seldom that the topic requested is printed on just the day asked, for my schedule is prepared a long while in advance. I mention this so school pupils will not be disappointed if they fail to find a certain topic on a certain day.

My life is a busy one, for I do a great deal of traveling, besides writing newspaper articles and books. With the help of my assistants, I handing newspaper articles and books. to town-for a job. She hates the soli-tude of the Styx. She's determined not to marry a farmer and spend her days down on the farm. Yet her friends have frightened her by repeated warnings that business experience will to-tally unfit her to be the home-loving, home-making wife which she has dreamed of being. "Will it?" she asks

A professional man whose work brings him into close contact with family life says that the more he sees of marriage the more convinc-ed is he that a business experience ed is he that a business experience is invaluable to a girl, and here's how. She learns a lot of things in the course of her job that raise her efficiency quotient as wife, mother, home-maker and member of society. Paradoxically, he puts housekeeping at the top and explains that a girl has to do a bang-up job of systematic housekeeping if she goes over matic housekeeping if she goes over big with the boss. There's her desk to be kept in order, pencils sharp-ened, pens and inkwells filled, sta-tionary in place, copies of outgoing letters and incoming originals filed. She must be able to lay her hands on everything at a monent's notice. on everything at a moment's notice

Second, she gets the low-down o the problems and perplexities that every businessman must face. She becomes expert in dealing with his moods. She learns how to keep him in a good humor and how to woo out of a bad humor. There is very little about man nature that she doesn't know when she has rounded out the first year. All of which fits her to be a good companion and comrade to her prince when, and if, he rides up.

Third, she quickly discovers that temperamental maladies, tempers and tears may give a man a pain in the neck but they never put an extra cent in the pay envelope. She discovers too that kicks and complaints about long hours of work and back-breaking responsibilities usually elicit the response that she is welcome to move on if she can do better.

Fourth, meeting bills, collecting ac Fourth, meeting bills, collecting accounts, balancing books and keeping a business out of the red, teach her in the mechanics of money, the necessity of bargaining for only what can be paid for, the necessity of setting something aside for emergencies that always arise in the most surprising manner and at the most unexpected time.

It is probably true that a girl who is geered to the exciting gait of a busy office misses it when she is married and is shunted out of thick traffic into the quiet corner of the apartment or cottage. Maybe she is a bit downhearted when her polished nails, plunged in dishwapolished nails, plunged in dishwa ter, lose their shine. Maybe he ter, lose their shine. Maybe her nimble fingers that played on the typewriter itch for the feel of the keys, perhaps there are moments when she would gladly swap the pots and pans for the pens and pen-cils, and swap the vacuum for the dictaphone. But this doesn't mean that she regrets her marriage bar-gain or that these passing thoughts make her any less a good wife and housekeeper.

Every experience we have in this life comes in handy sooner or later. We never learn anything that we can't use some sweet day. So surely a lib-eral business education that includes courses in systematic housekeeping, economics, management, self-discipline and a miscroscopical study of the genus home is obliged to be a valuable cation for the girl who expects to be a wife, mother and home-maker.

My Day ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

YORK, Pa., Thursday .- George William Patterson, of Castine, Maine, who has sent the President a poem before, has just sent in another one, two lines of which I want to quote:

"Who spares not self, with valor runs his race,

So greatly doth he yearn To serve the people whom true hearts embrace, His country's love shall earn.'

It does not always seem as though this were true, and yet all public approval sometimes is, in the long run I think the lines quoted are true of those who give unstintingly of themselves and keep their courage.

Yesterday afternoon we cast political interests aside and turned entirely to the younger generation. James and Betsy's little girl, Kate, was christened in the house at 4 p. m., while her sister Sara looked on with great interest. Both children woke up election night when the Hyde Park Club came down to serenade the President, and instead of being frightened or cross they looked out of the window with the keenest enjoyment. When I spoke of this to their nurse the next morning and marveled at their Little Kate, named after her grandmother, Mrs. Harvey Cushing, will find it easy to remember her christening day in the future. James had it easy to remember her did get here in time with Kate's godfather and one godmother. The other godmother came from New York. Our son, James, felt that because of the campaign in Massachusetts he was obliged to stay there Wednesday night and be with those who had worked with him, but he was in touch with his father by telephone all through the evening.

Early this morning I started for Washington by motor, taking a picnic missed at an early date.

Miss Williams has been associated with the Quitman Free Press, owned and edited by Mr. and Mrs. Royal Daniel, since her graduation from high school here. She has made a distinctive place for herself in Georgia journalism, and her personal column under the caption "This Weary World," was awarded a silver trophy two years ago in the Georgia Press Association for the cleverest column in a Georgia weekly paper.

From her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Williams, she inherits a mixed French and Irish strain which may well account for her racy wit, her discriminating mind and personal charm. BEAUTIFY THE SHOULDERS AND UPPER ARMS.

It takes a straight backbone and a good pair of shoulders to wear the latest evening gowns with dash. It won't be any kind of a season for you if you have let your upper arms get flabby and your shoulders heavy, or if der girdle.

The following exercise is very effective in filling out unbecoming hollows at the base of the neck, and in giving rounded loveliness to the shoulder tips.

Position: Standing erect in good posture, hands in front of chest.

Movement: Make small backward circles with the tips of the elbows by moving the shoulders—not the arms.

Perform six times, then rest.

This exercise is for the entire shoulders—one the arms.

shoulder blades and stringlines
The shoulders can be beautified by exercising the arms. The muscular network of the shoulders, arms and back are correlated in beautifying exercises. The movements which use the arms at the shoulders reduce or fill out the arms as needed, cover the shoulder wings and discipline the backbone.

The following exercises are designed to beautify the back, arms and shoulders and arms are within the reach of every woman.

Balanced Reducing Menu.

Movement: Make small backward circles, swinging the arm straight, up over head, back and down. Do not bend the clow. Make 12 circles with one arm and 12 with the other.

Pendulous flesh on the back of the upper arm is most disfiguring in an evening gown. Flabby arms can be made firm and lovely by exercise taken with the arms held at right angles to the body. Scrawny, underdeveloped muscles can be filled out with exercises taken in the same position. Remember always that slim, molded shoulders and arms are within the reach of every woman.

the labor situation in other lines might be an important market factor over the next several months.

The share list boiled for about an hour and a half after the opening when the ticker tape was almost continually behind floor transactions. The feverish pace slowed later.

Coppers fell back despite a raise in the domestic rafe to 10 1-2 cents a pound, a new 6-year top. The export price of the red metal was lifted to another peak for the past five years. Tin futures soared the limit permitted in a day's trading. Corn, at Chicago, was up 1 1-4 to 2 1-4 cents a bushel. Wheat was off 1-4 to 3-4 and cotton lost 20 to 45 cents a bale.

Foreign currencies were mixed in terms of the dollar.

Items of market interest included an optimistic summary of retail and wholesale distribution by Dun & the Bradstreet, and a less than seasonal decrease in last week's freight loadings.

Standard Oil of New Jersey declared a 75-cent extra, but the stock dropped 3 points to 67. U.S. Market Letter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Balance of market conditions have held the spot cotton average fairly near the 12-cent level for a month or more, reports the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Active milling demand and some further crop injury was offset by rather light export trade and the usual hesitation through election time. ime. Sales of finished goods increased for the militing demand and some further crop included the control of the Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, middling f. o. b. 12.65. AVERAGE PRICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 6.—
(AP)—The average price of middling cotton today at 10 southern spot markets was 12.12 cents a and October at 11.30 bid.

The decline occurred in the face of a bullish downward revision of crop estimates, reports of heavy dry goods sales and good weekly figures. Most of the trade has made up its mind at present to a figure under 12,000,000 bales in the next government estimate. Some still hold to the theory however, that an estimate well theory, however, that an estimate well above this figure will be released next Monday by the government.

Worth Street reported that 16,000,000 yards of print cloths were sold yesterday, but this news had little effect on prices. Most of the professional element had deserted the market write after the government remarks ket until after the government report and most of the trade's activities was on the selling side.

The weather was ignored as a market factor, with most interests of the impression that colder weather or rainy conditions from now on would impression that colder weather or rainy conditions from now on would have little ultimate results on the crop as a whole.

Trade buying in near months for price-fixing purposes was more than offset by heavy hedging, particularly in December and March.

Weekly figures showed that the crop is passing rapidly to interior points and from there on into the ports and export demand. Spinners takings were under a week ago, in what was considered the customary election lull, but exports and spot demand held up well.

Steel Production.

NEW YORK, Nor 6.—Production of 4.545.001 gross tons of steel ingots during October was the greatest of any month since August, 1929, and was exceeded in only seven months in the history of the steel industry, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today. Only in October, 1928, and from March through August of 1929 was the monthly ingot output larger than last month. The all-time record monthly output was 5.256,246 gross tons, established in May, 1929.

Presumably West opened his fourth highest club. Declarer, of course, ducked and won with the club queen.

The diamond queen obviously would be the next play, and when the nine appears from West, an overtake in dummy is mandatory. A count of tricks discloses that only tive of the six diamonds are necessary to the contract. The overtake of the queen insures this number against any sub-sequent break. Since the contract was reported defeated, the deciarer must have overlooked this elementary safe-ty play. Failure to overtake would lim-it the declarer to three diamond tricks and leave him with the hopeless pros-pect of finding four tricks in the spade and heart suits, in addition to the two club tricks already established.

Former Racing Driver Quickly Learns to Fly After only five hours of dual in-struction, W. J. Stoddard, Atlanta capitalist and former race driver, made his first solo airplane flight, at the municipal airport here yesterday. At one time Stoddard was an outstanding automobile racer and raced on the old Candler speedway which was located where the airport is now. Later he raced pigeons over Atlanta.

The flight was made in his new plane, which he purchased several months ago and he declared: "I'll be racing airplanes before long."

Detective Triumphs

By GEORGE BARTON.

Men may have no regard for hu- his mind a genuine baseball fan man life and still get great pleasure out of innocent pastimes. Which brings to mind the strange case of the man with the blinking eyes.

Some six years ago Detective Kenny gave chase to a man who had been trying to rob a home in Queens borough, New York city. He was a provided the idea of Hilton he learned something else about the man that caused him to go ahead with his fir lead. It was that Hilton had blinking eyes. The word went out to pick up the suspect, but at the end of 48 hours that person was still at liberty. It was then that Pyke had a real inspiration. He heard that Groh was to play in Brooklyn that afternoon and he invited McCarthy and Jackson and two plainclothes men to go out and see the game.

It seemed like a strange thing that man life and still get great pleasure could not possibly be a murderer.

McCarthy made it his business to find out all that was possible concerning the suspect. He learned among other things that Hilton had played third base on the prison baseball nine. He also discovered that he was a dyed-in-the-wool baseball fan. When he was at liberty he never missed a game if it were possible to go to one. Moreover, he was an intense admirer of Heine Groh, the famous third baseman. It was his study of Groh's methods that prompted Hilton to play third base on the prison nine.

Books of Livingston & Company, Atlanta investment brokers, will be brought into federal district court under a court order signed by Judge E. Marvin Underwood.

From these books, Thomas M. Stubbs, receiver for the Bradley companies, and attorneys for Stubbs, will attempt to check the history of Bradley's manipulation of the funds he invested for his clients.

A hearing also has been called for Monday in the offices of Harry Dodd, referee in bankruptcy, at which Stubbs and his attorneys will question employes of Livingston & Company, who were familiar with Bradley's affairs. Receivers are said to be seeking some clue to so-called hidden assets.

It seemed like a strange thing that a group of detectives working on a murder mystery should spend an afternoon at the ball game. But Pyke knew precisely what he was doing. The officials reached the park before the game started and seated then tall, thin man who wore a gray cap and a light overcoat. As the detective approached him the fugitive pulled a pistol out of his coat pocket, shot his pursuer in the neck. Three hours later Detective Kenny died from the wound, one more police martyr to duty.

The curious part of it was that Kenny was the fourth policeman who had been shot in the same way by the same man. The incidents roused the whole department. The bluecoats were particularly stirred over the grabbed the pistol he had pulled out, grabbed the pistol he had pulled out, grabbed the pistol he had pulled out, grabbed the pistol he had pulled out,

"I'll give you my card," was the ready response.

As he said these words he reached into his coat pocket, but the detectives were too quick for him. They grabbed the pistol he had pulled out, deftly slipped a pair of handcuffs about his wrists. Hilton eventually confessed and was electrocuted.

Judge Adjourns Court Following Fire Which Destroyed Courthouse.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Nov. 6 .- (A)-Troup county, which yesterday lost its courthouse by fire, resumed its affairs today in the Masonic hall, which has been donated for use as temporary quarters

Judge Lee Wyatt, who was conducting a session of superior court when the fire broke out and spread rapidly through the building, adjourned the court indefinitely. No change was reported in the condition of Mrs. Otis Williams, health department employe, who suffered a skull fracture, broken arm and broken jaw, when she jumped from a second-story window to evade the flames.

The fire, which lasted three hours, destroyed the second and third floors and clock tower. The courthouse, built in 1904, was insured for $53,000, an amount officials said would cover the loss.

County commissioners held a spe-

County commissioners held a special session late yesterday, and there was discussion in some circles of rebuilding the courthouse on a new site, leaving the present one for conversion into a park.

Origin of the fire was probed today by officers.
